

I'm really worried about our media losing its diversity, and what that means for free speech.

A few media giants now dominate our airwaves. Consolidation has been happening at alarming speed, but Big Media wants more and likely will get it unless the FCC and Congress speak up for democracy.

I note that the FCC will decide on June 2 whether six existing rules are to be eliminated or modified.

We need to have more, not less diversity for democracy to flourish.

Ruth Gallag